

1. The Importance of Goals: Why Set Goals? How Do They Help?

Goals:

- Clarify what the desired outcome is, how to accomplish it, and by when providing a road map to focus daily efforts most effectively.
- Increase the likelihood employees will achieve the desired results, therefore minimizing the possibility of performance issues down the road.
- Make it easier to evaluate an employee's performance when it's been made clear what is expected from them.
- Help to engage employees! When an employee sees how their goals fit with broader departmental goals or priorities, it makes their work more meaningful.
- Are a way to challenge and stretch employees; to help them perform even better and surpass expectations.
- Are forward-facing and provide the individual with the direction in which they need to move both for their success and for that of the Department. Ask the question: Where is the employee now and where do you want/need them to be?

2. Goal Setting Tips for Success

- Clarity: A clear goal and specific goal can be measured. It should leave no room for misunderstanding. Goals should be explicit regarding what behavior is desired and should paint a picture of what successful completion looks like. Visualize the desired outcome!
- Commitment: For goals to be effective, ideally, they are mutually agreeable between the supervisor and employee. Of course the goal should be in line with expectations you have for the employee. This approach gives the employee the opportunity to share their hopes and ideas for future performance and growth.
- Resources: Working with others to identify the resources and collaboration that may be needed to achieve ones goals is essential to success.
- Feedback: ongoing, regular, check-ins is a chance to correct/coach or clarify before the goal has been reached. The employee may have questions, operational needs may shift, and/or the employee is in process of going about things the wrong way. Open, two-way, communication is essential!
- Challenge: most employees are motivated by a challenge! When possible, a goal should offer the opportunity for growth, or a "stretch" in responsibility, and may even be inspirational, arising out of the values and interests of the department and/or organization. Whatever the level of challenge the goal should be achievable.
