Literature Walter Cohen,2017-01-19 Walter Cohen argues that the history of European literature and each of its standard periods can be illuminated by comparative consideration of the different literary languages within Europe and by the ties of European literature to world literature World literature is marked by recurrent systematic features outcomes of the way that language and literature are at once the products of major change and its agents Cohen tracks these features from ancient times to the present distinguishing five main overlapping stages Within that framework he shows that European literatures ongoing internal and external relationships are most visible at the level of form rather than of thematic statement or mimetic representation European literature emerges from world literature before the birth of Europe during antiquity whose Classical languages are the heirs to the complex heritage of Afro Eurasia This legacy is later transmitted by Latin to the various vernaculars The uniqueness of the process lies in the gradual displacement of the learned language by the vernacular long dominated by Romance literatures That development subsequently informs the second crucial differentiating dimension of European literature the multicontinental expansion of its languages and characteristic genres especially the novel beginning in the Renaissance This expansion ultimately results in the reintegration of European literature into world literature and thus in the creation of today's global literary system The distinctiveness of European literature is to be found in these interrelated trajectories

Characterisation of the Main Characters and Comparison to Hitchcock's Film Adaptation, 2021-02-15 Pre-University Paper from the year 2018 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Literature Works grade 1.0 language English abstract In the following, the Gothic elements in Rebecca by Daphne du Maurier will be examined, and the main characters will be analysed. Every character in the novel represents a different type of social class of people with different habits and living standards. Therefore, I am going to interpret these types with their qualities and debilities and figure out the actuality in du Maurier's characters. After that, my focus will be on the comparison between the novel Rebecca by Daphne du Maurier and the film adaptation of Alfred Hitchcock. In order to compare them, I will search for parallels or common features and differences between the novel and the film. Daphne du Maurier is widely known for her Gothic novels and short stories. Unaffected by the literary fashions of her days, she wrote simple narratives that appealed to the reader's love of adventure, fantasy, sensuality, and mystery. Her novel Rebecca, published in 1938, was probably her most famous novel. It has never gone out of print and is one of the great international bestsellers. Du Maurier began writing it at a difficult point in her life; it was only a few years after the death of her adored father, she was pregnant with her second child, and her husband, an officer in the Grenadier Guards, had been posted with his battalion. Her homesickness and her resignation about her wifely duties together with a guilty sense of her own ineptness were elements she included in her Gothic romance Rebecca. The novel's iconic opening line was born out of du Maurier's own preoccupation with Menabilly, a country house in Cornwall which was later the inspiration for Manderley in Rebecca. Literary Digest International Book Review Clifford Smyth, 1926 Beacham's Encyclopedia of Popular Fiction Kirk H.
