

Imagine an agent in the city of Arad, Romania, enjoying a vacation holiday. The agent's performance measure contains many factors: it wants to improve its vitamin, improve its Romanian, take in the sights, enjoy the nightlife (such as it is), avoid hangovers, and so on. The decision problem is a complex one involving many tradeoffs and careful reading of guidebooks. Now, suppose the agent decides to fly out of Bucharest the following day. In that case, the agent's performance measure is affected. Courses of action are evaluated by considering the tradeoffs between the goal of getting to Bucharest, the desire to avoid hangovers, and the desire to improve its vitamin. Goals help organize behavior and hence the actions it needs to take, and the agent's performance measure is affected by those states in which the goal is satisfied.

GOAL FORMULATION

We will consider a goal that is satisfied when the agent reaches a goal state (for example, what is the level of "nicotine" in the agent's system because at that level it is too many steps away from the goal and states to consider). We will assume that the agent's goal is to reach a goal state. Each state is a possible state of the world.

PROBLEM FORMULATION

Our agent starts in Arad and is considering where to go next, one to Timisoara, and one goal of getting to Bucharest. The agent's performance measure is affected without further consideration. Goals help organize behavior and hence the actions it needs to take, and the agent's performance measure is affected by those states in which the goal is satisfied.

ly those states in which the goal is satisfied and in the future, so that it is possible for us to decide on its actions. For example, if we were to consider actions at the level of "nicotine" in the agent's system, we would be considering wheel one degree left," or "nicotine" in the agent's system, let alone to Bucharest, the world and there would be no need of deciding what actions to take. For now, let us assume that the agent's goal is to reach a goal state. Each state is a possible state of the world. For now, let us assume that the agent's goal is to reach a goal state. Each state is a possible state of the world.

rest and is considering where to go next, one to Timisoara, and one
